INTRODUCTION

The incomparable group of coins and medals described in this catalogue is an important and most valuable part of the Palace Collections of Egypt. One remarkable aspect of this collection is that, in spite of its vast size, it is strictly circumscribed in range. Apart from a comparatively small number of items, it includes only issues of the 19th and 20th centuries. In offering it for sale by public auction the Egyptian Government is giving collectors of these modern coins a unique opportunity. They will find a wealth of material to excite their interest both in the regular currency issues and in the patterns and proof strikings; many of these have never before appeared for sale at public auction and indeed have only changed hands privately on rare occasions.

Much care was exercised in building up the collection and particular attention was given to ensure that date sequences struck at various mints were complete throughout the range of issue. To separate and sell piecemeal these series would have been to undermine the work of many years (and in some cases more than one generation) of collecting. Many of these very desirable sets, especially in the United States section, are being offered en bloc; thus buyers will be able to bid for series which, if the coins were bought individually, would take very many years to complete.

The 2,798 lots include about 8,500 coins and medals in gold as well as a very extensive assemblage of related silver and copper issues. There are also no less than 164 specimens in platinum—the largest group of platinum coins ever to be offered at auction. The last 56 lots of the sale describe a fine collection of Bank Notes of all periods. Here again the particular strength is in United States issues.

Apart from the United States, the collection embraces the 19th and 20th century coinage of the rest of the world. The sale begins, for instance, with 179 lots of gold coins from South and Central America, the first lot in the sale being an Argentine Doubloon of 1808 commemorating the defeat of the British at Buenos Aires. This section of the sale includes no less than nineteen Brazilian gold bars, issued between 1767 and 1888, of which very few specimens have been sold at auction during this century.

Amongst the collections of the coinage of European countries the most interesting section is probably France. There are 140 lots of French gold coins, the series starting with the rare Louis XIII écu d'or piedfort of 1618. Of the coinage of Asiatic countries, rare specimens are catalogued in the Annamese, Cambodian and Chinese sub-divisions of the catalogue.

Ancient coins are not numerous; they include fine examples in gold of the Ptolemys of Egypt and a few choice Roman Aurei. Of outstanding interest in this section of the collection are Roman gold bars (Lots 1467-1470) of the 4th century A.D. from the Aboukir and Haromszeker hoards. No single piece of Roman gold of a similar kind has appeared at auction since 1935.

With so vast an array of important coins and medals in one sale, encumbered by such an embarras de richesse, it has been found difficult to select those lots most suitable for special emphasis, and a catalogue has been prepared which is deliberately conservative in style and presentation. Good wine needs no bush. As many as practicable of the pieces have been illustrated in the 72 plates, which, taken in conjunction with the printed descriptions, will provide prospective bidders with an adequate picture of the lots, their importance and their desirability. Those responsible for the preparation of the plates found that the taking of accurate plaster casts of coins was impossible in Cairo for technical reasons; they had to resort to direct photography which, though not ideal for illustrating extremely fine coins, has produced results not unsatisfactory in the circumstances. An asterisk after the lot number indicates that the coin is illustrated. The plates, except for the first and last, are arranged in pairs with obverses on the left hand side of the open catalogue and reverses on the right.

Many of the coins come from famous collections. Much of the very complete series of the United States of America issues are from the famous W. H. Woodin, H. B. Earle and Col. Green collections, whilst the equally famous Count Ferrari collection was the source of many examples in the French section.

In the descriptions of the coins and medals care has been taken to define the state of preservation as accurately as possible. The general grading used is 'extremely fine', 'very fine' and 'fine', but other qualifications have been used where applicable which the reader will find to be self-explanatory. Very many of the silver and copper coins have been cleaned in recent years, often leaving the surfaces somewhat, though not irrevocably, stained.

In cataloguing the collection the existing arrangement was followed as it afforded a sequence convenient for the collector. In general terms the arrangement is that under each country heading catalogued alphabetically by continent, currency issues, proofs and patterns, and where applicable, colonial issues and their proofs and patterns follow in that order. A small number of lots are not in their strict chronological order. Where necessary, particularly for the medals, weights have been given and these are in grammes unless a statement to the contrary is made.

The dispersal of this collection will rival the great sales of the past, the H. Montagu and J. G. Murdoch sales at Sothebys at the turn of the present century, the J. S. Jenks sale in Philadelphia in 1921 and the sale of the Lord Grantley collection in London in 1943-45. It is hoped that the present catalogue will be a not unworthy record of a memorable occasion and, in due course, will take its place in the bibliography of numismatics.
