EDITORIAL

This issue comprises just the one subject. The author is most anxious to have this study, what he considers to be a draft, before members as soon as possible in the hope they will respond with equal enthusiasm by notifying new finds, date extensions etc with which the final edition can be produced.

The dating of this issue reverses precedent, it being dated for when it would have normally appeared. This may give the Editor time to resume long delayed work on the London Maritime section of the Handbook, of which more later.

Enclosed is an order form for Peter Bathe's "The Bye Posts and Cross Posts of London" - it will a useful Christmas present from either yourself or a member of the family not knowing what to buy you.

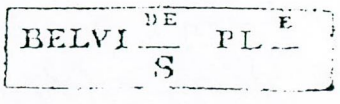

The programme for 1993 comes with this issue and those members who come to meetings are reminded they should use the programme as identification to gain entry.

The following was a Receiving House located within the Rules of the Kings Bench Prison at St. Georges Fields, Southwark.

The London General Post Letter Receivers 1660 - 1838

By Hugh V Feldman

Introduction

This paper represents the continuation of a study of the General Post Receivers which began with the identification of receivers "initials" handstamps published in Postal History No. 256.

I must thank Professor Barrie Jay who kindly corrected a number of errors in my first hesitant steps and who has given me further encouragement, Mr John Scott and my wife Susan who have spent many hours at the Guildhall Library reading through thousands of pages of London Postal Directories on my hehalf. For the tracking down, and photocopying of the Post Office cash books I am indebted to the support and help of Kevin Squelch at Post Office Archives.

The period spanned with this work is from the introduction of the first handstamps bearing the location of the receiving house in 1789 to the merging of the General Post receiving houses with those of the London Twopenny Post, on 11th December 1838.

The paper concludes with a catalogue of General Post receivers, their locations, occupations and the handstamps used. The illustrations are taken either from material within the authors collection, and that of other collectors, or from reproductions of the handstamps from the Date Impression Books of the Post Office Records 1825 - 1841 published by Proud Bailey Ltd. Brighton 1979.

For the sake of completeness the catalogue includes the receivers listed in the period 1660 to 1794 and their handstamps, where positively identified.

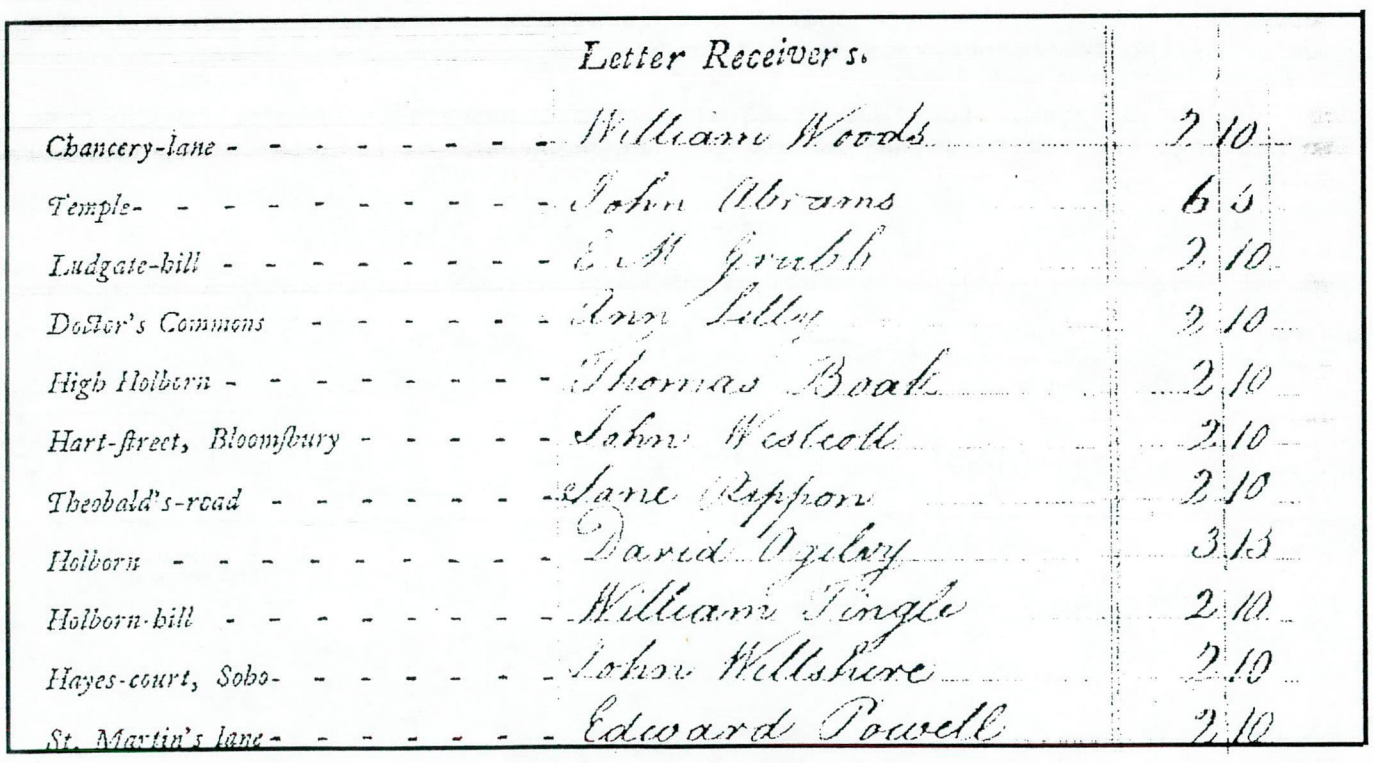

Identification of Receivers

Whilst the General Post Office occasionally published notices giving the names and locations of receivers, a more complete record is available from the Post Office Cash books in which the quarterly Salary Bills and payments to receivers were recorded. The majority of these records are found in "Post 9 Reference 1 - 161" of the Post Office Archives.

Figure 1 is a typical portion of the cash book for the quarter ending April 5th 1801. It can be seen that the Post Office considered at this date the location of receiving houses to be long standing as ledger pages were pre-printed with location names. In practice many examples can be found where the receiving house was removed to a nearby road resulting in the issuing of a handstamp not compatable with the cash book location. In some instances, especially where the receivers address has not been recorded in a directory, confusion can occur when matching handstamps to the associated receiver.

At some time in the period 1804 - 1810 the cash books revert to hand written entries indicating that even the General Post Office administration could become confused.

Two periods of cash book records are as yet not located , these being for the years 1804 - 1809 and 1821 - 1833. From the available records it is probable that a significant number of changes occured in these two periods. Examples of handstamps for locations not covered in the records are known, such as Derby Street recorded used in1832 (See British County Catalogue. Volume 3 London. Page 19).

Receivers Locations

A total of 507 receivers have been listed within the General Post in the period 1660 to 1838. By searching the various directories of London published throughout the period, and from Post Office notices, a total of 270 have been located and their occupations determined.

The Post Office commissioned Critchett & Woods to produce an annual directory in 1800, unfortunately they failed to request the identification of receivers in these publications. The first directories which identified receiving house locations was published under contract to the Post Office by Kelly's in 1843 which listed traders and house occupants by street and house number.

Earlier directories were published by, Kent's, Bailey's and Holden, and although many of the receivers are found listed, there remains considerable gaps to be filled. Figure 2 is a typical directory entry from "Holden's Triennial Directory " Fifth Edition published 1805. in which Boak & White in High Holborn are listed (See Figure 1). at which Thomas Boak was the listed receiver.

A second scource of information related to identifying receivers locations is through the series of "London Street Views" published by John Tallis in two series in the late 1830's and 1848 respectively. In addition to a directory of merchants for each of the streets illustrated, Tallis commissioned artists and engravers to prepare elevations of the street covered by each individual booklet.

In 106 booklets a number of receivers of both the General and Twopenny posts are listed, and in some cases clearly identified on the elevations. A typical example of the centrepiece of the booklets is shown in Figure 3. A full reproduction of all known booklets was published by the Topographical Society in 1976. Original examples can be seen at the Guildhall or British Libraries.

A total of 15 General Post receivers are listed in Tallis with a greater number of Twopenny Post Offices also shown.

The General Post receivers listed by Tallis are :-

David Rigge & R. Brockbank	35	New Bond Street
Samual Hales	112	Borough
M. Juddery	31	Fleet Street
Thomas Boak & Mary White	248	High Holborn

In addition to elevations each booklet included a map showing the general area covered by the booklet and, in a few instances a vignette of a specific building or landmark in the illustrated road. From the maps it is possible to determine the precise location of the receiving houses. (See Figure 4).

Receivers Occupations

Of the receivers whose locations and occupations have been identified and catalogued a pattern of trade catagories becomes clear.

The most common traders employed to act as General Post receivers were Stationers and Booksellers, with a preponderance located in or near the various Inns of Law. These being located at Gray's Inn and Furnival's Inn at High Holborn, Lincoln's Inn at Chancery Lane, Doctors Commons to the south of St. Pauls and Temple to the south of Temple Bar. From Figure 6 it is seen that some 30% of receivers fall into this trade.

Amongst the Bookellers is Budd & Calkin who are listed as "Booksellers to His Majesty". As can be seen by a reproduction of their billhead (Figure 5) it was not considered sufficiently advantagous to promote their role as a Letter Receiver.

At 33 Charing Cross in the early 1800's G. Jamison held a receivership whilst being described as "Time Piece Manufacturer to the Honourable Commissioners of His Majesties Navy". The short period of his tenure may have been due to an unauthorised inclusionof his name incorporated into the handstamp issued to him by the G.P.O.

The thought of a Coal Merchant holding a receivership creates images of blackened letters, however two are listed at Westminster Bridge Road (hot coals and air for Parliament) and at Wapping.

Amongst a variety of metal workers was John Elley, a Stove Grate Maker at 1 Corner of Hatton Garden in the period 1817 to pre 1833 and a Working Brazier at 68 Old Bailey, possibly making legirons and handcuffs for the Criminal Courts down the road.

Many other interesting traders acting as receivers may be found in the catalogue section.

The second most common with 17% are Grocers and Teadealers, amongst whom are listed Richard and Charles Fortnum of Fortnum & Co. at 183 Piccadilly during the period Post 1803 to 1838. Unfortunately the records of the company now known as Fortnum & Masons were destroyed during fire bombing in the Second World War and no information or records are available from this well known emporium.

It is interesting to note that the nature of receiving houses remains substantially unchanged today with "Post Office Counters", the retail operation of the General Post Office being found almost exclusively in newsagents & general stores.

Amongst the balance of receivers a number of interesting locations and occupations can be mentioned.

For a short period in 1759 a Mr. Franklyn is listed in the cash books at Charing Cross. In early 1759 Benjamine Franklin travelled from Philadelphia to act as Agent for Philadelphia. Kents directory for 1759 lists him at Craven Street, Strand. During 1759 Franklin also negotiated the position as His Majesties Postmaster for North America from which position he was dismissed in 1774. It is possible that to learn the operation of the General Post Office he took a receivership for a short period.

Occupation	Number	% of Total
Booksellers & Stationers	67	30
Grocers & Teadealers	37	17
Drapers, Mercers, Taylors ect.	26	12
Oilmen & Colourmen	15	7
Metal & Wood Workers & Ironmongers	15	7
Inns & Coffee Houses	8	4
Perfumers & Hair Dressers	8	4
Tobacconists	8	4
Chandlers (Various)	7	3
Druggists & Chemists	6	2
Others	20	10

It is possible that more of the receivers locations and occupations can be identified by a search of the Rate Books of the Cities of London, Westminster and Southwark.

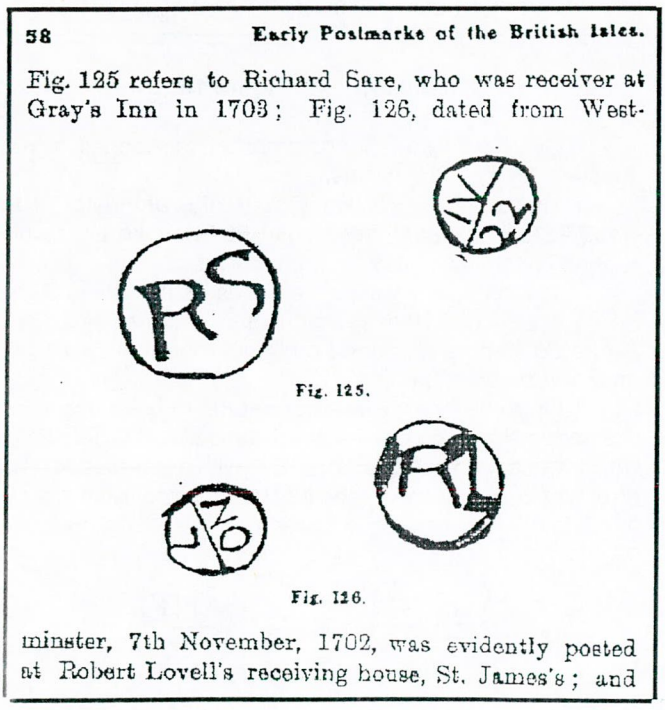

Development of Handstamps

For those who are unfamilier with the early handstamps of the London General Post the following short description is provided. A more detailed study may be found in Postal History No. 256.

The first receiving house identification handstamps appeared in 1670 and were numbered 1 to 7 with and the abbreviation "OFF" believed to mean "Office". By 1675 receivers were using handstamps bearing one or two initials which corresponded to either the receivers surname, given and surname or the first two letters of the surname. Examples of these may be seen in the catalogue with John & Alice Grone at Temple Bar, Richard Sare at Gray's Inn and William Nott at Pall Mall respectively.

The receivers initials are first mentioned by John G. Hendy in "The History of the Early Post Marks of the British Isles" published in 1905. The purpose of these handstamps is quoted by Hendy from a Post Office record as "lest when wee come to examine their parcell, and finding paid letters mixt with unpaid letters, under Rated and the like, they (the receiver) pretend ignorance of such letters, to the prejudice of the office and sometimes the owners of them.".

Hendy illustrated his text with a number of drawings, some of which are reproduced in Figure 7. It can be seen that they are close to those of known examples reproduced in the catalogue.

minster, 7th November, 1702, was evidently posted at Robert Lovell's receiving house, St. James's; and

The receivers initials handstamps remained in use until 1792 when there were 41 receivers listed. A change in the design of handstamps occured during a seven year period during which a number of provisional designs appeared. A lack of significant quantities of material from this era make it difficult to determine the evolution of the design finally adopted in 1796.

The initials handstamps were first replaced by examples bearing the name of both the receiver and his office, of which only a small number are recorded. Typical of these handstamps is that of George Streeting at Charles Street, Soho recorded in the period 1789 -1791 illustrated in Figure 8.

Between 1790 and 1794 a circular handstamp with the letters G.P.O. in the centre appearedb but are only recorded at four receiving houses (See Figure 9). The immediate precurser of the design finally adopted appeared in 1794, this took the form of a straight line handstamp illustrated in Figure 10. Only five of this type are listed in the "British County Catalogue, Volume 3. London".

The Final Designs

In 1796 a range of standard handstamps were introduced. During the period of the initials type handstamps the Post Office may have left the procurement of handstamps to individual receivers. This practice probably led to the wide divergence of designs and sizes in the later period of use.

The new handstamps were probably issued from the date of their introduction, to the receivers by the Post Office, as, by 1825 they appear in the Date Impression Books. A total of 236 different handstamps were recorded by 1992 with new finds occuring regularly.

The designs fall into 6 seperate groups illustrated in Figures 11 to 16 and cover 143 seperate receiving house locations. The most commonly used designs are represented by Figures 12 and 15 whilst the rarest are those of Figure 16.

A seventh type is listed in the "British County Catalogue, Volume 3 London" , these being a lower case unframed type. I believe that as all but 1 of 8 listed are recorded after 1838 they are associated with receiving houses of the Twopenny Post administration rather than that of the General Post. The majority are associated with receiving houses listed only in the Twopenny Post cash books.

The occurance ratio of the 6 designs illustrated are shown in the following table.

		Quantity	% Occurance

In the early years of the designs use two receivers attempted to personalise the handstamps with the inclusion of their names. In the first example, that of Jamison at 33 Charing Cross the attempt was so subtle that it may well have gone unobserved by the clerks of the General Post Office. The handstamp illustrated in Figure 17 is recorded in 1802 and 1803 only.

The second example, that of Stratton at 342 Strand was more blatent (See Figure 18) and perhaps again went unnoticed for some 5 years between 1804 and 1809 as the surname appeared to be part of a location name.

Only four other handstamps of this series deviate substantially from those illustrated.

That used by William Woods, the proprietor of the Georges & Six Clerks Coffee House, 39 Chancery Lane which is of an unusually small size.(Figure 19).

The receivers within the Rules of the Kings Bench prison at Belvidere Place, Southwark used the designs of Figure 20, and as an added rarity used both black and the more unusual red ink.

Only one engravers error seems to have occured in this period, that used by Hester Williams at 438 Oxford Street which was issued in September 1831 with a reversed "4". This error was corrected in March 1832 with the provision of a new handstamp, (see catalogue section).

General and Twopenny Post Receivers Merge

The General Post receivers handstamps were, with a few exceptions withdrawn from use on the 11th December 1838. On that date the General Post Office combined the receiverships of the General Post with those of the Town and Country areas of the Twopenny Post.

It is interesting to note that it is not until 1838 that a Cash Book for the Twopenny Post appears to come into existance and that a number of the General Post receivers appear in it. More of the General Post receivers are listed in the 1839 cash books, although the larger majority of the previous General Post receivers clearly lost out to the existing Twopenny Post receiver where the receiving houses were located in the same street.

It is probable that this merger was first considered at the time of the Twenty First Report of the Commissioners of Revenue as a map was produced in 1830 for the report which details the location of the two organisations receiving houses.

The first instructional notice concerning the merger was issued to Letter Receivers on the 30th November 1838 and reads in part as follows :-

"To the Letter Receiver of

The proposed arrangements for Consolidating the General and Two-Penny Post Receiving Houses, will take place on the 11th Day of December next, and the following instructions are sent for your guidance under the new system.

The Two-penny Post paid Letters are to be stamped as at present, but the amount of postage received for the General, Foreign and Ship letters, must be marked on the Letter in large figures in Red Ink,, and the "Pd" must also be written.....and the amount of postage told up, and included with the Two-penny Post, and entered in one amount on the Letter Bill.

The postage you receive on General and Foreign Letters, is to be brought to account in the same manner as the Two-penny Postage now is.....ect.

W.L. MABERLY, Secretary."

Receivers Transfered to the Twopenny Post in 1838

The following 15 receiverships were transfered to the Twopenny post on 11th December 1838, the balance of General Post receivers appear to have lost out to the local twopenny post receivers.

Unidentified Handstamp Locations

The following handstamps are recorded or appear in the Date Impression Books but whose office locations are unidentified by the Author. Some of them are from the period of missing cash book records or from locations listed under a different name in the cash books. If readers of this article can cast further light on these mysteries the Author would be most greatefull.
